WEATHER OF CONCERN

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A colder spring storm will begin to move into the Sierra and northeastern California today, with the peak intensity expected this evening through Saturday morning. Several inches of snow are possible tonight into Saturday morning in the Sierra. Mountain travel impacts are likely.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A low pressure system moving inland through California on Saturday will bring small chances for light precipitation for late morning into the evening on Saturday in southwest California, mainly near the coastal slopes of the mountains. It will also bring stronger and gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts.
